Raise your hand if you've been uncertain about what to study in?

As you can see you're not alone / don't worry you're not alone

I am currently a senior and I still get stuck on what I wanna do.

It's normal, it happens to everyone.

Pains #1

Since my first year, I was indecisive about my major. There are so many to choose from.

Pains #2

Honestly, having a lot of options can be a good problem. But in this case I felt overwhelmed .

Pains #3

It didn't help that we have to declare our major by the end of sophomore year.

Two years sounds like a lot of time right, but is it?

Before starting school, you choose your classes. A few months later, you pick more. And if still you're unsure about your major, you might need extra classes which could be costly and delay graduation.

Transition

So how can we help?

Solution

Our solution has 2 paths.

Students can take an assessment about their skills and interests to generate potential careers.

This will result in a summary of the major and their classes, as well as extracurricular – clubs, internships, study abroad – anything related through the university will be provided.

That also includes funding resources.

On the other hand, if a student has a solid idea of their career but wants to explore more, they can directly filter the results to find their resources.

This way they can save their time, reduce stress, and achieve their goals.

We simplify the process to amplify the opportunities.
